News Readers Given Four Times Subscription Value In Novels Alone in 1922

Daily News readers in 1922 have received more than four times the cost of their yearly subscriptions through novels alone. The News has published 18 novels during the year just closing and is now printing its nineteenth novel.

Taking the approximate cost of a novel at $2, it is seen that Daily News readers have been given the privilege of reading stories that would have cost them more than $35 in book form.

Only one novel was published during the year that had previously been published in the cheap edition. Thus, Daily News readers had the privilege of reading late fiction and many of the leading stories of 1922 were carried.

The News began giving its readers novels the first week in 1922 and there has been one published continuously since that time. Scores of letters of appreciation have been received from readers and these have encouraged The News to keep up the feature in 1923.

Many more novels will be published during 1923. In fact, the present novel, "Captain Hood," written by Rafael Sabatini, will be published in a number of issues in 1923, as the story just began Friday.

"The Shadow Trail" by Edison Marshall was the first novel published during 1922. Beginning early in January and continuing for two weeks, this story met with so much favor that The News decided to keep up the feature. "The Step in the Snow" by Isabel Ostrander followed the same month.

"Gunshot Pass" by William MacLeod Raine and "Boskins Dale, Pioneer," by John Fox, Jr., were published in February.

During March, "The Wrong Face" by Isabel Ostrander and "The Rider of Golden Bar" by William Patterson White were published.

During April the headliner was "If Winter Comes" by A. S. M. Hutchinson. This book is considered one of the greatest books of the past century. During the end of the month, "The White Desert" by Courtney Ryley Cooper began and continued over into May.

"Linda Lee, Inc." was the novel during the end of May and the early part of June. Radio was very popular during the summer and "On Wings of Wire" by Arthur H. Reece was published in June.

"Scaramouche" by Rafael Sabatini and "The Tattooed Arm" by Isabel Ostrander were published in July.

BARON AURIEMMA SINGS IN SPEARMAN IN BEHALF OF S. A.

Special to The News
SPEARMAN, Dec. 30.—Baron James V. Auriemma, who represents the Salvation Army in New Mexico, Arizona and the Panhandle of Texas, was in Spearman the first of last week and succeeded in raising a good little sum for this great work. The baron is a noted singer and gave a concert at night at the school house, which was highly enjoyed by a large crowd. Linda and Lela, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Belmont, assisted the baron with one song, and he says the little girls have wonderful voices and should be given training, as they will develop into noted singers.

Baron Auriemma is an understudy of the noted Caruso. He was well pleased with his visit to Spearman and the cordial manner in which he was treated here. He said that of the money he raises for the Salvation Army, 75 per cent goes to the home in El Paso, 25 per cent is retained to pay the expenses of the representative and 10 per cent is kept subject to the call of the home representative, to be used in case of some great disaster in which the Army would work.

completed were written by the same author, Edison Marshall. Any magazine in America would have been pleased to have had the writers in its columns that The News has had in 1922. Edison Marshall, Isabel Ostrander, John Fox Jr., A. S. M. Hutchinson, Arthur H. Reece, Rafael Sabatini, Louis Joseph Vance, Melville Davidson Post, Robert W. Chambers, A. A. Milne, Edwin Palmer Courtney Ryley Cooper, William MacLeod Raine and William Patterson White would add dignity to any magazine in America.

But these great stories, written by great authors, were just part of the day's paper for The News in 1922. Few papers in a city the size of Amarillo give its readers such a wonderful variety of stories as The News—and the subscription price was the same as it had been in previous years.

Proud of Park
SAN ANGELO, Dec. 30.—Tourist Park, with its many facilities, is one of the outstanding developments of the Board of City Development, according to the annual report of Secretary W. E. Yager. Approximately $2,400 was raised to build the beauty improvement, and the park board was authorized to spend $125 a month to maintain the park, he reports. A swimming hole was equipped with platform, spring board and life line, and from the middle of June to within the last few days there has never been a time when the park was not occupied by campers, he said. The number sometimes running as high as 150 persons in a night.

Many Vets in Dallas
DALLAS—Cold weather up north has driven many former service men here in search of warmer weather and employment, according to James Deramus Kelly, acting adjutant of the John W. Law Post No. 57 of the American Legion.
